McKesson Medical Imaging Professional Services™ Technical Optimization Consulting

Reduce imaging support costs without compromising patient care

Imaging is one of the most highly visible areas in healthcare — but with that visibility comes risk, expense and worry. As organizations rush to implement information technology to support cardiology and radiology, they are not always using their imaging systems to the best advantage.

Maintaining multiple or duplicate vendor-specific systems is expensive and inefficient. McKesson is your single-source provider with the experience and knowledge to accurately, efficiently and quickly help you get the maximum return from your imaging investment.

With the McKesson Medical Imaging Professional Services™ Technical Optimization Services offering, we can help you achieve increases in efficiencies and help ensure that high tech does not mean high cost. Our range of consultative services can be adapted to any customer or vendor. Our highly experienced clinical and technical resources participate in assessing your total business infrastructure. We dive deep into the business requirements, metrics and financials driving your medical imaging business and then document where you are, where you need to go and provide a roadmap of how to get there.

Simplifying your operations

There are major opportunities to help you simplify your use and storage of patient data — from consolidating multiple imaging systems into a single optimized system for reduced overhead and response time to developing mitigation plans that reduce the risk associated with regulatory compliance and security and privacy issues.
